JEAN-LUC PICARD managed to surpass a 22-year career as first officer and later captain of the U.S.S. Stargazer with an even more impressive record as captain of the fleet's flagship U.S.S. Enterprise. In the latter role, he not only witnessed the major turning points of recent galactic history, but shaped them. From surviving as the only human abductee of the Borg invasion in 2366, to becoming a contact point with the Q Continuum, to serving as arbiter choosing the ruler of the Klingon Empire and exposing Romulan treachery.

WILLIAM T. RIKER became first officer of the U.S.S. Hood at age 27 under Captain Robert DeSoto. During this stay, he was offered his first command on the light cruiser U.S.S. Drake, but turned it down. From there, he was promoted to commander and picked sight unseen from among 50 candidates by Jean-Luc Picard as his first officer on the new Galaxy-class U.S.S. Enterprise. Riker grew so satisfied with his assignment under Picard, who quickly dubbed him "Number One," that he twice turned down two more commands of his own.

DATA was the fifth and next-to-last model android created by Dr. Noonien Soong on the Omicron Theta science colony, activated on Feb. 2, 2338 when found by the crew of the U.S.S. Tripoli who inspired him to join Starfleet. After being deemed sentient, he was accepted to the Academy in 2341. Data has always wished to be more human, experimenting in everything from art, acting, music, and poetry to keeping a pet cat Spot and imitating human behaviors ranging from laughter, sneezing, and whistling to dance, grooming, and bedtime routines.

BEVERLY CRUSHER spent her formative years with her grandmother, Felisa Howard, who raised her from an early age after her mother died. In fact, it was Felisa's knowledge of folk medicine which inspired the younger Crusher to choose medicine as her life's work. It was her marriage to Lt. Cmdr. Jack Crusher that provided the major trauma of her adult life when he died on a U.S.S. Stargazer away team mission under the command of Captain Jean-Luc Picard in 2355. She later signed aboard the U.S.S. Enterprise as his CMO in 2364.

GEORDI LA FORGE was born blind, but thanks to a unique VISOR instrument - which, though painful allows him to "see" the entire electromagnetic spectrum. As an ensign, he served under Captain Zimbata on the U.S.S. Victory. La Forge first met Captain Picard sometime before their Enterprise tour, when he impressed his superior officer so much with his all-night refit of a shuttle engine after an off-hand comment by Picard during an inspection tour. His mastery of technology allowed him to rise quickly to chief engineer.

DEANNA TROI, while of mixed human and Betazoid heritage, is one of many from her planet active in the Starfleet counselor corps. Following Academy graduation, she returned to her homeworld for advanced psychology studies at the University there where she met and enjoyed a deep romance with her "imzadi," Starfleet Lieutenant William Riker. Despite latent feelings, their professional life has remained largely platonic yet warm since their surprise reunion on the U.S.S. Enterprise two years later.

WORF was born into a powerful political house on Qo'noS and carries vivid memories of a typical Klingon childhood. However, Worf's life was changed forever in 2346 when his family was wiped out by Romulans at the Khitomer colony. Saved and adopted by human parents, he lived for a time on the farm world Gault and later, Earth. After graduating from the Academy, he signed aboard the U.S.S. Enterprise in command division as a junior-grade lieutenant, though quickly rose to chief tactical officer gaining a promotion to full lieutenant.
